ABSTRACT

The brochure contains descriptive introductory material on the first of seven volumes covering the Arab world. Five volumes are devoted to a chronology of events throughout the Arab world (including Arab-Israel relations) from 1900 up to 1967. The last two volumes contain a keyword index to the events. The project contributes to the Middle Eastern Studies and also serves as a model project to scholars and students concerned with research of other world areas. The first half of the brochure, arranged in five parts, includes: 1) a description of the project background, problem, purpose, scope, organization, research facilities, and progress information; 2) information on use of the computer to promote new techniques for handling, restoring, and disseminating data concerning the Arab world; 3) useful data on the Arab world; 4) abbreviations used in indices; and 5) acknowledgements. Over half of the pamphlet furnishes sample chronology and index pages. (SJM)

Political and Diplomatic History of the Arab World, 1900-67: A Chronological Study, published in seven volumes, is the first part of a three part project covering the Arab world, 1900-67.

Five of the seven volumes list events chronologically. The remaining two volumes are an index to the events.

The chronology volumes contain brief accounts of internationally significant events concerning the Arab world, whether occurring within or outside of Arab countries. Except for the early years, accounts are on a day-by-day basis. Due to the mass of material involved, a reduced-print format has been used in the chronology -- each 8½" x 11" page contains four photographically reduced pages. Although reduced, these pages can be read without resorting to any magnifying device.

The index (in two volumes) is a computer generated and computer typeset keyword index to the events in the chronology. It is not an index to the sources from which the accounts were drawn, but rather an index to the accounts as recorded in the chronology. Under each keyword are one or more entries. Each entry supplies two items of information: one is a brief reference to an event, i.e., a few words summarizing the account of the event as given in the chronology, and the other is the date on which the event occurred.

Thus the user can first peruse the references under the topic or topics he has selected and, if amplification of any reference is desired, he can then consult either the account in the chronology or contemporary accounts in newspapers, journals, government documents, and other primary material generated on or about the dates cited.

The initial breakdown is temporal. Thirty-three separate indices using identical subject headings have been prepared; they cover periods varying from six months to twenty years. The dual objective of this arrangement is to present subject-oriented material in conveniently usable increments and to allow a subject-in-time as well as a purely subject approach to research.

Political and Diplomatic History of the Arab World was developed pursuant to a contract between the Institute of International Studies of the United States Office of Education and the University of Wisconsin. Other sources of support included the Harvard University Center for Middle Eastern Studies, the Harvard Law School Library, and Harvard International Legal Studies, Hoover Institution, and the Department of State, External Research.

Reprinted in this brochure is the introductory material which appears in the first volume and samples from both the chronology and index.

As noted in the opening paragraph, Political and Diplomatic History of the Arab World is the first part of a three part project. Remaining to be published are: (1) the documents from which the accounts in the chronology were drawn; (2) a biographical reference work giving information about persons cited in the chronology.

DR. MENAHEM MANSOOR is currently Professor and Chairman of the Department of Semitic Studies at the University of Wisconsin, Madison. He holds B.A., M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in Semitic languages and has studied at the London University School of Oriental Studies, at King's College, London, and at Trinity College, Dublin (Gold Medalist and Member of the Academic Senate).

Professor Mansoor was Research Fellow, Harvard University Center for Middle Eastern Studies, 1961-62 and 1964-65. A chief interpreter and Assistant to the Press Attache (British Foreign Service) at the British Embassy in Israel from 1949 to 1954, Professor Mansoor is author of over 50 items in the field of Semitic Studies. For this project he personally traveled in North Africa, the Near East, Rabat, Beirut, Jerusalem and to Western Europe to collect materials from such archives as the Foreign Office, Chatham House, French, Dutch and German Foreign Ministries, and international organizations in Geneva. In the United States, Professor Mansoor and his staff carried out extensive research at the Library of Congress, the State Department, the National Archives, the Middle East Institute, the Dag Hammarskjold Library at the United Nations, the Harvard University Libraries and at Hoover Institution.

Preface

It is a pleasure to have the opportunity to write the preface for this landmark undertaking, a work both timely and of continuing value to scholars, students, diplomats, and businessmen.

Professor Mansoor's pioneering project is unique and clearly successful in several respects. His efforts have produced the single most comprehensive and useful collection of documentary and event data on the political history of any major region in the non-Western world. Not only has he identified, located, collected, and analyzed an enormous mass of material, but he has indexed it thoroughly, making it quickly and conveniently accessible through especially designed computerized information storage and retrieval techniques. The achievement is all the more remarkable when one takes into account the highly complex history of the Middle East, the elusive nature of much of the documentation emanating from that region, and the formidable language barriers that pose special obstacles for most scholars concerned with the area.

His efforts will result in a more effective interdisciplinary approach than has previously been possible on problems and subjects which are often intrinsically interdisciplinary in nature. Not only will the availability of a vast amount of data coupled with an efficient retrieval system permit a more effective approach to much research, but the very existence of such resources will undoubtedly stimulate new hypotheses and generate more broad-gauged and useful interdisciplinary studies. This is especially significant in a time when the Middle East is in the forefront of national and international concern.

The archives and retrieval system Professor Mansoor has created have great potential for still another kind of progress, one relatively rare in academic scholarship. He has literally created the tools which will make possible increased scholarly productivity on a particularly important region of the world. Not only will those interested in the Arab world be able to locate data far more rapidly than ever before, but for the first time serious researchers will be able to devote the major portion of their effort to analysis rather than to the very time consuming and laborious task of information gathering. Reducing some of the fundamental problems of time and material to manageable proportions is particularly important for cross-national and cross-disciplinary researchers and projects. The savings in research manpower that this project will make possible, both directly and through materials acquisition, are considerable indeed.

While the contribution to Middle Eastern studies is great, the value of the project as a model to scholars and students of other world areas is equally important. For the first time, the practical values of such a data bank so organized and operated can be readily demonstrated to any scholar, businessman, or diplomat seriously concerned with research on several countries, time periods, subjects, and academic disciplines.

In short, there is every indication that this unusual research project will make a significant difference over a wide area of important concern. From its inception and for a great many years afterwards, it will remain not just an important research tool, but will be a literally indispensable reference collection for an increasing number of people, governments, and organizations concerned with the Middle East. While inevitably there will be some imperfections and gaps in an undertaking of this scale, the great bulk of the effort is likely to stand the test of time.

Thus from virtually any point of view, Political and Diplomatic History of the Arab World represents a very considerable achievement and is unprecedented in its conception and execution. Professor Mansoor should be commended for his breadth of vision, his insight into the interrelationships of the Arab world, and his organizational ability. In addition, his insistence on maintaining high standards for his work and his persistence in seeing this long, complex, and difficult task through to conclusion despite innumerable obstacles are surely praiseworthy. He may not have been the first scholar to see the problem in its entirety, but he is surely the first to have done something about it on a significant scale.

From all indications by specialists in a variety of fields, Professor Mansoor's project has set new standards for scope, reliability, and utility in information collection, analysis, storage, and retrieval systems in documentary and political history in international studies. We in the Office of Education are proud to have been associated with this undertaking and to have helped bring the work to its present stage of completion.

CHRONOLOGY

Introduction

Part One

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROJECT

BACKGROUND

The Middle East is one of the regions of our world which has been consistently misunderstood and inconsistently studied. And yet, it is a vital region, of strategic importance for the United States and for world peace.

Nationalist movements which have gathered force in the past three decades in the Middle East are known to the Western world chiefly as a result of crises that have occurred. However, the awakening social and national consciousness of Middle Eastern countries, their aspirations and the directions in which they hope to point their governments as well as their destinies are chronicled in their new constitutions, in state papers and in the day-to-day decisions and commitments embodied in their treaties and international agreements.

For the sake of international understanding, it is imperative to make these valuable sources of information available to students, historians, scholars, and government officials of both the East and the West. Discussions with university librarians, political scientists, historians, students of the Arab-Israel conflict, and other authorities concerned have confirmed my belief that serious attention should be given to such a project. State documents throw light on the opinions of the policy-making leaders, their moods, their struggles, and especially their national and international aspirations. If the documents were to be made readily available to researchers, students and statesmen, it would constitute a major contribution to knowledge and political understanding.

The project, therefore, aims to meet the ever-increasing demand for information about this important and strategic region of the world through a computer-based documentary analysis, storage and retrieval system.

THE PROBLEM

The importance of area-centered studies of the Arab world is undeniable, but so are the difficulties of such studies. Problems arise partially because of the language barriers experienced by Western diplomats and specialists in international relations, and partially because of the sketchy, widely-scattered and randomly catalogued sources of primary information. Previous and current constitutions, international agreements, and the foreign policy speeches of, by, or about Arabs simply have not been organized into a cohesive whole. It is to help remedy both of these difficulties that this project has been undertaken.

A specialist must absorb as much as possible of the political behavior of an area before producing valid studies of international processes. It is recognized today that the study of international relations in an area must be preceded and accompanied by the acquisition of a certain fund of basic and authoritative information. The author believes this knowledge can best be obtained by studying such sources as international documents, military pacts, technical aid programs, treaties, basic legislation, major speeches, and so on, rather than simply relying on interviews, broadcasts, or newspaper reports. The documents of the Arab world have multiplied many times over since the end of World War II, when most of its countries won their independence. In fact, there were more documents in and on the Arab world during the two years of 1956 and 1957 than there were during the entire period from 1900 to 1939.

This project grew out of a desire to provide objective source data on the Middle East, using every reliable source possible. Our guiding principle is to maintain strict objectivity, by gathering all official documents and recording events without interpretation.

Dr. D. B. Bobrow has observed that in order to evaluate and analyze historical documents properly, the following requirement must be met: there must be 1) reliable information and factual data, i.e., events and documents, 2) usefully organized data and 3) readily accessible data.[1]

One cannot arrive at explanations of behavior in international relations unless one has large and reliable data bases, stored in an orderly manner, whose contents can be manipulated and retrieved in numerous but independent ways.[2]

Although international affairs are increasingly characterized by abundant data and analyses, most studies have been based on the assumption that very little adequate information is available. Our project should provide all the necessary comprehensive data for any study of the Arab world.

THE PURPOSE

The purpose of this project, then, is to identify, study and critically describe all of the documents and international agreements in all languages entered into by the Arab countries from 1900 to 1967, as well as such prior agreements as seem particularly relevant to the later period. All types of documents will be included: agreements, constitutions, declarations, decrees, oil concessions, official notes, letters or messages, important laws bearing on international relations, memoranda, minutes (agreed), protocols, reports, official statements, radio and television statements, and the reports and resolutions of the United Nations. The project should meet the growing demand for information on this important and strategic region of the world through a computer-based documentary analysis, storage, and retrieval system. (For a more detailed description of the project, see the section on "The Project and the Use of the Computer.")

METHODOLOGY AND ORGANIZATION

The entire work is divided into three main parts: chronology, biography, and documents.

The chronology volumes consist of day-by-day accounts of internationally significant events concerning the Arab world, whether occuring within or outside of Arab countries. The chronology was prepared after a vast number of books, periodicals, journals, newspapers and other important sources and references were selected and carefully scrutinized. The following activities were then performed:

a. Important data were identified and put on cards, following a special, concise editorial format.
b. The cards were put in chronological order, grouped by individual dates.
c. Entries from diverse sources were sorted by date and accurate items for inclusion in the chronology were prepared.
d. The presence of all personalities of importance and all documents suitable for further investigation were noted.
e. The first draft of chronology entries were typed in duplicate.
f. The compiled chronology was edited and proofread to prepare it for the writing of titles and typing of final copy.
g. Titles for computerized indexing were written.
h. A computerized index was prepared and carefully checked.
i. A magnetic tape for the printers was prepared.
j. The chronology was sent for final typing.
k. The final copy was proofread and sent back to the typist for final corrections.
l. The ready-for-camera copy was prepared for the printers.

The second part of the work is a biographical volume, consisting of a brief description of the persons mentioned in the chronology or documents.

The third and major part is the actual collection and description of the documents. When the documentary data is compiled, each document will be entered as a separate unit. The basic unit is the listing for an individual document. Each entry consists of the following:

a. A serial number serving to identify the document.
b. Title of the document identifying the partners to the agreement or document.
c. Main body of the entry, bringing together all relevant identified data or facts on the juridicial status of the document, including, in the case of an agreement, the date and place of signature, dates of ratification, entry into force, duration, modification or extension and termination. A concise abstract of the document under study and other references bearing on this particular entry will form part of each entry. This information is compiled from the document itself or from sources listed in the entry or both.
d. Sources and references: "source" means the text of the document; "reference" refers to information gathered from any work (book, article, news item, and so on) relating to this entry.

SCOPE OF THE PROJECT

The following countries, alliances and areas are included in the project. All other countries are included as far as their relations with the Arab world.

Abu-Dhabi
Aden
Algeria
Arab Federation
Arab League
Baghdad Pact
Bahrain
CENTO
Dhofar
Dubai
Egypt
Hejaz
Iraq
Israel-Arab Relations
Jordan
Kuwait

Syria
Transjordan
Trucial Coast
Tunisia
United Arab Republic (UAR)
United Nations
Yemen

RESEARCH FACILITIES

During the past seven years we have collected most of the major documents (about 35,000 items) from the archives of many countries directly involved with the Arab world, including all the Arab countries, Israel, Britain, the United States, France, Italy and the Soviet Union.

The principal investigator and his assistants made several short trips to Britain, France, Holland, Switzerland, Italy, Israel, the Middle East and North Africa for this purpose and photo-copied hundreds of documents.

We obtained relevant and available documents from the following offices: the Royal Institute of International Affairs of London; Foreign Office archives, Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris; League of Nations Archives, Geneva; Arab League Headquarters, Cairo; UN and Jewish Agency Archives, New York.

The International Legal Studies Division of the Harvard Law School made available copies of several hundred documents bearing on the project, as well as hundreds of documents on the Arab world which originated in the USSR.

REVIEW OF PROGRESS MADE

Our research data now consist of over 200,000 indexed cards supplying critical and analytical information on over 120,000 events, 10,000 individuals and 35,000 documents, their dates, backgrounds, contents, and sources—in several languages. The present volumes cover only the chronological study of the project. The sole criterion for inclusion of an item is its relevance to international affairs and to the diplomatic and political history of the Arab world.

On an experimental basis, abstracts of all documents, details of title, dates of signature and sources in respect to the 1956–58 period have been completed. A preliminary computer index is also prepared for these years.

A draft of the biographical volume consisting of all personalities listed in the chronology and documents has been completed. It is hoped that this volume will be published before December, 1972.

There is enough research and data on hand to fill seventy to seventy-five volumes of 250 pages each, excluding the actual reproduction of documents (about eighty to one hundred volumes). We can at this point, for example, supply all the necessary information and data on all documents relating to the Suez Canal, oil concessions, the Arab-Israeli conflicts, the political history of Jerusalem, the Arab refugees, US-Arab relations, and so forth. A senior official of the London Foreign Office thinks we have the largest collection of documents on the Arab world that can be found in one place.

SUPPORTING AGENCIES

During the initial steps of our project we received very useful assistance in materials from the rich collections of documents available at the Hoover Institution at Stanford University.

Dr. E. C. Borgeson of the Harvard Law School Library and Professor Milton Katz, Director of the International Legal Studies at Harvard Law School, who have studied the project carefully, placed library and other facilities at our disposal, including photo-reproduction of over 3,000 documents.

University of Wisconsin support for the project came from the College of Letters and Science, the Graduate Research Committee, the University of Wisconsin Work-Study Program and the University of Wisconsin Computer Center.

Support was also received from these other sources:
—Institute of International Studies of the US Office of Education (main support)
—Harvard University Center for Middle Eastern Studies
—Harvard Law School Library
—Harvard International Studies
—Hoover Institution, Stanford University
—Air Force Office of Scientific Research, Washington, D.C.
—Department of State, External Research

In 1962 and again in 1965, the author was appointed Research Fellow at the Harvard University Center for Middle East Studies to work on this project.

UTILITY OF DATA FILE TO POTENTIAL USERS

The crucial issue of our project is its usefulness to potential users. Fortunately we were persuaded by Professor Robert Burrowes of New York University to test our materials for a project of his that was being funded by the National Science Foundation. We placed all requested available data for the period of 1961–67 together with the corresponding computerized indices at his disposal. He then presented a paper at the American Political Science Association in September, 1970, and another at the Middle East Studies Associates in November, 1970. Both papers were analyses of conflict and cooperation within and between the Arabs and the Israelis and among the Arab nations themselves.

After a careful study and examination of our materials, which included a two day visit to the University of Wisconsin, Professor Burrowes concluded in his papers: "The Mansoor file draws from a wide variety of sources, covers all the politics in the Middle East and spans an extremely long period of time (1900–1967). It is undoubtedly the best multi-purpose, long-span file presently available on the Middle East."

In a letter dated May 22, 1970, Professor Burrowes writes:

> The project constitutes the richest and most reliable file of event data on the international politics of any region of the world. This judgment is based upon the sobering experience of collecting Middle East event data for two years, a rigorous comparison of my data file with Mansoor's, and a visit with Mansoor and his staff at the University of Wisconsin. The cross-sectional and longitudinal scope of the data file is simply staggering (all nations or quasi-nations in the Middle East from 1900–1967). Virtually all kinds of publicly-recorded verbal and non-verbal international behavior are captured in Mansoor's net. What should be most gratifying to the data-poor longitudinal analyst or historian is the fact that the file seems as complete for the late 1940's and 1950's as for the 1960's. The elaborate system for collecting, checking and rechecking the data should be most reassuring to those familiar with the malevolent nature of event data and their sources. In the near future, the user of event data to study the international politics of the Middle East who fails to have recourse to the Mansoor file will be wasting valuable time and jeopardizing the outcome of his research endeavors."

We have received numerous letters of evaluation; these are available from the author or from the Office of Education, Institute of International Studies. It would suffice here to give one or two more observations:

> [Professor Mansoor's] documentary and chronological study ... seems to be unprecedented in the field of documentary history, and uniquely valuable. There has never before existed, as far as I know, any such detailed and extensive documentary study of the political history of any of the major regions of the world. ... There is no doubt, of course, that the publication of Professor Mansoor's material would be of value for the United States and the world.
> —Charles Van Doren, Executive Editor, The Annals of America; Associate Director, Institute for Philosophical Research; Consultant to the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

> ... Professor Mansoor's project is a most remarkable one and well worth supporting in whatever way possible. The project will be useful to a whole range of enterprises concerned with the Middle East, and its use of the computer will certainly revolutionize studies of the Arab World—at a time when such studies are needed more than ever before.

PUBLICATION SCHEDULE

Project begin in 1960

A. CHRONOLOGICAL STUDY texts with analytical computerized index — Period: 1900–1967; *35 typed volumes (over 10,000 pages)
Completion Date: September, 1971 (ready for publication)
Publication Date: March, 1972

B. DOCUMENTARY STUDY — Period: 1900–1967
*Estimated number of typed volumes: 20–30
Estimated Completion Date: June, 1973
Estimated Publication Date: December, 1974

C. BIOGRAPHICAL GLOSSARY — one volume—Draft Completed
Estimated Completion Date: September, 1971
Estimated Publication Date: March, 1972

*Typed volumes of 300–350 pages (pages of about 40 lines)
Provided adequate funds are available

IMPORTANT OBSERVATIONS ON CHRONOLOGY SOURCES

When listing chronological items, most journals, periodicals and yearbooks do not give the source of their information, mainly because they lack space. If we were to include the sources for each item we would have to use four or five additional volumes. However, any item included in the chronology which is of a documentary nature will be found in the Documentary Study under the corresponding data to be published in the near future. Here, the title of the document, its abstracts and all sources will be listed. (See full description and sampling in the chapter on "The Project and the Use of the Computer" on page xiv.)

For further study and reference, we are giving a list of the main periodicals, journals, yearbooks and books used in compiling data for the chronology. The list is by no means exhaustive.

TRANSLITERATION OF ARABIC NAMES

All of the following prefixes of Arabic were changes to al: el-, il-, az-, as-, ar-. All prefixes were hyphenated. Thus:

al-Wakeel (for el-Wakeel)
al-Solh (for al-Solh)
al-Habib (for el-Habib)

All nouns, with very few exceptions, containing the word Abd were changed to Abd-al- and hyphenated. Thus:

Abd-al-Aziz (for Abdel-Aziz)
Abd-al-Hamid (for Abdul Hamid)
Abd-al-Wahhab (for Abd al-Wahhab)

Exceptions:

Abdallah, Abdeen, Abdin, Abdo, Abdel Nasser

All nouns beginning with Abu-, Ben-, Ibn-, Von, and Van were capitalized as:

Abu-Musa, Bin-Zaki, Ibn-Saud, Van Ness, Ben-Gurion

The Arabic and Hebrew prefixes were hyphenated.

Generally, the most commonly used transliteration has been adopted for our project. Thus Nasser and not Nasir, Hussein and not Husayn, and so forth.

Part Two

THE PROJECT AND THE USE OF THE COMPUTER

OBJECTIVES

Our computer system is designed to promote new and better techniques for handling, restoring, and disseminating scientific information, in this case, the vast data concerning the Arab world. The computer system provides for training of information specialists and the improvement of research library facilities in this discipline.

PROJECT SCOPE AND COMPUTER SYSTEM

Purpose of the System

The purpose of the project is to outline steps required to design a computer that will produce multi-reference tools for the historical research and analysis of the chronological, documentary and biographical data.

Procedure Used for the System

1. Identify data of most probable interest and usefulness to future users and researchers.
2. Abstract and summarize data in a meaningful title from the source documents.
3. Arrange data by the most probable reference indexes through carefully selected key words.
4. Present research findings to the researchers, users, historians and social scientists in a usable form.

COMPUTER OBJECTIVES

The primary research tools developed by this program consist of:

1. A chronological list of all the documents and events with their titles abbreviated so as to include all the important key words needed for the computerized index. For example, the program listed over 7,000 documents in chronological order for the 1956–1958 period.

Sampling from the 1957 list of documents:

57 SEP 17D  JORDAN ATTACKS SYRIA COMMUNISM
57 SEP 18A  DULLES ON USSR MIDEAST POLICY
57 SEP 18B  NLF ASKS FOR ALGERIA QUESTION ON UN AGENDA
57 SEP 18C  SYRIA ON ROLE AS USSR SATELLITE
57 SEP 19A  JORDAN ON SYRIA INTERNAL INTERFERENCE
57 SEP 19B  DULLES AT UN ON USSR IN MIDEAST
57 SEP 19C  UK ON YEMEN WITHDRAWAL FROM ADEN
57 SEP 19D  HUSSEIN ON SYRIA NATIONALISM
57 SEP 19E  SYRIA USSR ECONOMIC AID TALKS
57 SEP 19F  SYRIA ON US NAVY NEAR SYRIA
57 SEP 20A  JORDAN ON SYRIA NOTE ON HENDERSON IN MIDEAST
57 SEP 20B  BITAR ON SYRIA TURKEY RELATIONS
57 SEP 20C  ASSALI ON DULLES CHARGES AT UN
57 SEP 20D  LIBYA ON FOREIGN POLICY
57 SEP 20E  AIKEN ON ALGERIA ELECTIONS
57 SEP 20F  GROMYKO AT UN ON MIDEAST

2. (a) A master list of automated key words generated by the program for the entire project.

Sampling of 1958 program:

RECOGNITION     SAUD            SEQUESTRATION
REFORM          SAUDI-ARABIA    SETTLEMENT
REFUGEES        SCANDINAVIA     SHARETT
RELATIONS       SCIENTIFIC      SOBOLEV
RELIGIOUS       SCOPUS          SOCIAL
REPARATIONS     SCUA            SOCIALIST
REPORT          SEA             SOLH
RESIGNATION     SEAL            SOLIDARITY
RESOLUTION      SEATO           SOUSTELLE
REVOLT          SECRET          SOUTH-AFRICA
REVOLUTION      SECURITY        SOVEREIGNTY SARRAJ          SENATE          SOVIET

(b) Cross references. There is a generous application of cross references.

Sampling:

ACCORD      FOR     ACCORD      SEE ALSO    FRIENDSHIP #
ARMS        FOR     ARMS        SEE ALSO    WEAPONS #
ATOMIC      FOR     ATOMIC      SEE ALSO    NUCLEAR #
AVIATION    FOR     AVIATION    SEE ALSO    AIR #
COMMERCIAL  FOR     COMMERCIAL  SEE ALSO    TRADE #
HOUSE       FOR     HOUSE       SEE ALSO    CONGRESS #

A specific code structor is being developed which will permit easy access from the chronological index to the document summary, and vice versa, and ultimately from the summary to the document.

3. A retrieval multipurpose index of all the documents described in paragraph 1. The words used in the titles are also about 90 per cent key words. Thus, a document is listed about three to four times. In 1958, the 1,971 documents listed generated 6,145 entries in the index. Take, for example, the following document:

(a) SYRIA ITALY TRADE AGREEMENT
58 FEB 27B

This document is listed under SYRIA, ITALY, and TRADE. If in addition to this document, the researcher is interested in trade problems of the Arab world, he will find all trade documents under TRADE, whereas ITALY'S or SYRIA'S role in the Arab world, will be listed under ITALY or SYRIA respectively.

(b) US DULLES ON USSR MIDEAST AND ISRAEL
58 FEB 26E

Here US, DULLES, USSR, MIDEAST, ISRAEL, are key words. Under US or RUSSIA or ISRAEL, the researcher will get an instant listing of documents referring to those countries' roles on the Mideast. If a researcher is studying Dulles' policy only, he will obtain all the documents listed under DULLES.

(c) A retrieval multipurpose index of all the documents. Sampling below. (Each line refers to a complete entry in the volumes)

4. A summary or abstract of each document included in the major chronological list is described in paragraph 1 above. This summary will supply the complete title of the document, date issued or signed, entry into effect (in the case of a treaty or similar accord), bibliographical sources and language source.

Sampling from entries of abstracts of documents:

57 FEB 02E Egypt, Suez Canal, Israel, UN

UN GENERAL ASSEMBLY RESOLUTION NO. 1 CONCERNING WITHDRAWAL

February 2, 1957 The Summary

Recalling its previous resolutions concerning withdrawal of Israel troops and deploring Israel's noncompliance, the resolution called upon Israel to make speedy withdrawal from Egyptian territory.

5. In addition to the documentary and chronological indexes, the program produces a conceptual and subject index relating to the major subject matter and issues, based on subject frequency concerning the Arab world. Military pacts, (Baghdad Pact, etc.) regional pacts (Arab League, UAR, etc.), refugees, Palestine problem, Arab-Israel conflict, constitutions, oil, and so on would be among the entries on this subject index.

6. Automated computer-based index to the Chronology: 1900–1967. The program proved very effective in its application to the chronological study of our project, which is presented in these volumes.

7. A biographical dictionary briefly describing the role and office of all persons mentioned either in the chronology or the documents, will be published shortly. Sampling selected at random (incomplete and tentative):

NAHHAS Pasha, Mustafa.
1927–52 Egyptian Wafd Leader
1930 Egyptian Prime Minister; out of power June 19
1936–37 Became Prime Minister on May 10, 1936 and remained in office until December 30, 1937
1942 Became Prime Minister, Foreign Minister and Minister of the Interior
1943–44 Egyptian Prime Minister; dismissed by King Farouk on October 8, 1944
1950–52 Wafdist Premier of Egypt. Also, Minister of Foreign Affairs

NAHLAWI, Abd-al-Karim.
1962 Leader of an army coup in Syria which deposed President Kudsi

NAJA, Rafiq.
1958 Lebanese Minister of Finance
1961–62 Lebanese Minister of Economy
1965 Minister of National Economy in Lebanon from July 25

NAJI, Muhammad Said.
1967 Deputy Permanent Secretary for Cabinet Affairs in South Arabia

NASH, Walter.
1958 Prime Minister of New Zealand; New Zealand's Representative to the UN

NASHAT Pasha, Hassan.
1939 Egyptian Ambassador in London

NEHRU, Jawaharlal.
1953–64 Indian Prime Minister

NASSER, Gamal Abdel.
1952 Head of the Egyptian Society of Free Officers which overthrew King Farouk
1953–54 Egyptian Deputy Premier and Minister of the Interior
1954–56 Egyptian Premier, to June 1956
1956 President of Egypt
1958–67 President of the UAR, elected on February 22, 1958
1967 Resigned on June 9 but reconsidered on June 10 and remained in office

8. APPROACH AND METHOD. The basic approach to attain our stated objectives involves the following steps: a review of the documents and chronology available, a reduction of the materials found in the documents and chronology into a format designed to serve the needs of the objectives enumerated above, the conversion of the data acquired from the documents into machine-computerized readable form and the creation of a computer program to produce the required indexes and, eventually, the summaries from the data required.

Standard well-known operating procedures are employed with special emphasis on language, titles, key words, editing, uniform orthography, and so forth. The program as developed functions over a wide range of documents and events and can be expected to produce end products which will be economically competitive with indexes and reference tools produced by conventional manual methods.

9. INFORMATION ON THE COMPUTER PROGRAM. Our program reads entries and gleans key words from them. All the key words are sorted alphabetically. Then each entry is indexed once for each key word it contains. Determination of key words is done by inputting a group of "stop words." All other words are key words.

Each entry in our automatic index is a short description of an event and the date on which the event took place. Each entry is more fully described in a document, which is also kept by date. It is possible to input several entries for an event, but this would most likely be done only if the event were rather important. The result would be more pointers to the event in the index, since the entry could be found under more key words.

The system is not on an on-line basis. The entries are punched cards. They exist in core long enough to be indexed and output to a printer or tape. A box and a third of entries takes about seven and one half minutes to sort and output. Ordinarily, output is stored on tape, and tapes are listed. Each tape file contains events for a particular year.

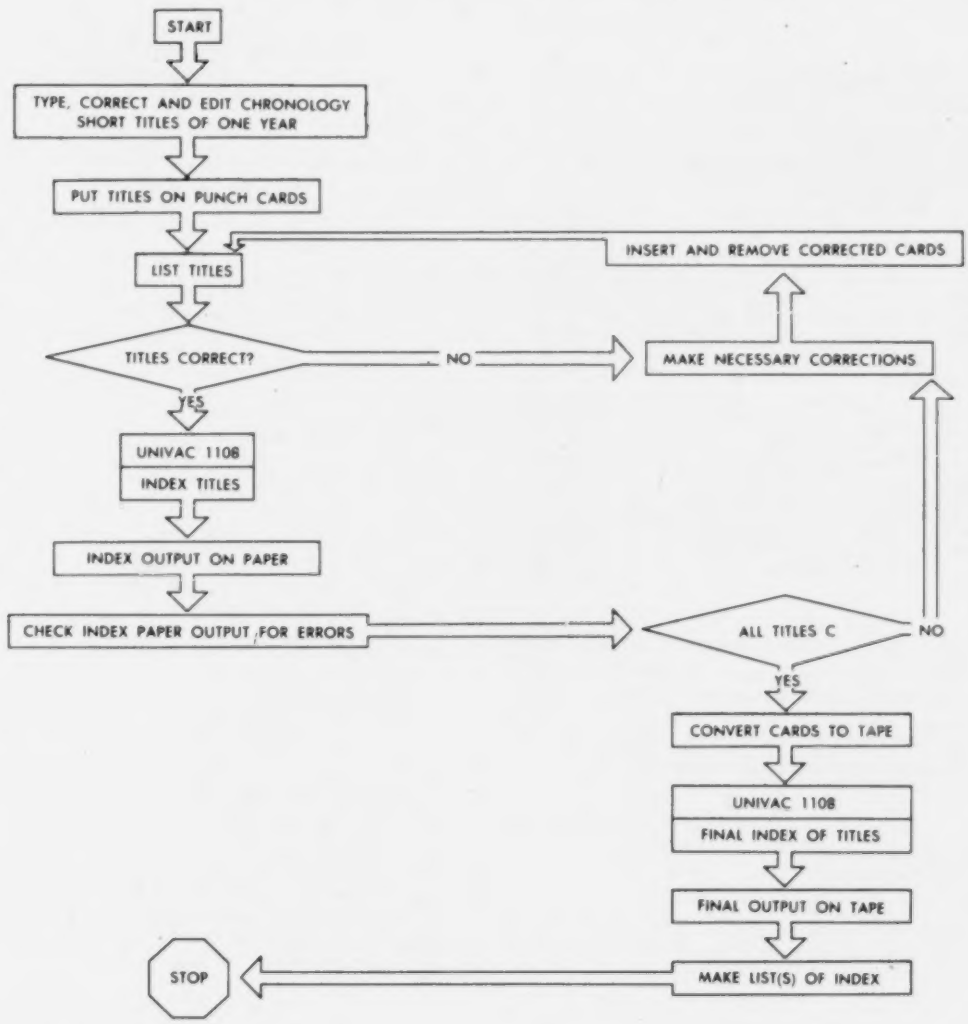
Until April 1, 1970, we used a CDC 3600, FORTRAN program, which has since been converted to UNIVAC 1108.

If a researcher is interested in the role of oil in the Middle East, the input of the word OIL would result in every entry that contained the word OIL. To be more specific, the input of the following pairs, USSR-OIL, UK-OIL, ISRAEL-OIL, UAR-OIL would provide an output organized under each heading with several sets of entries. For an even more selected subset of entries, US-USSR-OIL could be specified.

10. OTHER USES OF THE PROGRAM. The program may be used, among many other possibilities:

(a) for any area study if the data are available,
(b) for multi-reference cross-listings of the index of journals and
(c) for analytical content analysis of all the articles in the journals, or documents.

FLOW CHART OF COMPUTER WORK



11. PROJECTED ACTIVITIES FOR THE NEAR FUTURE. The principal investigator is already making the necessary plans to use microrecording techniques fully, in order to cope with the information deluge we have on the Arab world and with the up-dating of the data bank.

One or more of the following techniques will be used after further study and consultation:

(a) The use of standard 35-millimeter microfilm. A ten-inch reel can store all the documents for a five- or six-year period, with a special device to retrieve the document required.

(b) The use of aperture cards usually allows for storage of an average of 125 cards to the inch in a long bin. A computer searches 33 cards per second. Each such card will contain all data known about an individual document, including source, bibliographical information and the document itself. Thus, a researcher can get all the documents he needs for his article, say on the Refugee Problem, or on the Formation of the United Arab Republic, or on the British Attitude to the Nationalization of the Suez Canal, literally as he asks for it. The computer can be instructed to search among the appropriate combinations of subject headings in the index for documents meeting the researcher's needs and descriptions.

(c) The use of microfiche technique. The use of microfiche will enable us to store 70 magazine pages on a 4 by 6 inch plastic sheet. The sheets are easily retrieved manually.

(d) The use of the computer-driven photo-typesetter technique. The information fed to the computer will normally be stored in electronic tapes. It is now being used for our indexing purposes. However, eventually we plan to provide appropriate instructions to the computer-driven photo-typesetter, using the same technique as that for MEDLARS (Medical Literature Analysis and Retrieval System) at the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare's National Library of Medicine in Bethesda, Maryland. MEDLAR's experience is considerable. Instead of the uniform-sized capital letters which computers typically print, the typesetter produces —on film ready for the printer—neat columns of type in a traditional face, with capital and lower-case letters, boldface and regular, and with subject headings in a larger size type than the citations under them. As a result, the study is as attractive and readable as any book or journal prepared by the slow, conventional typesetting method.

It should be noted here that articles published by members of the Johns Hopkins University Center for Research in Scientific Communication have been consulted for this section.

12. IS THE COMPUTER REALLY A VILLAIN? The computer is implicated and portrayed as a villain, since it makes it easier for a research worker to get a result. However, what is often forgotten is that these results are only facts not readily apparent to others in the field. If the facts could be easily assembled, the researcher would have adequate time at hand to study and evaluate the facts. Today a scholar would spend weeks and months to acquire a fund of facts, and by the time he assembled some or most of them, very little time would be left for effective evaluation.

"The real villain in the information explosion is not prolific computers or prolific authors, so much as it is poor communications. That may sound odd, but let me try to explain what I mean. More people want and need more facts about more things today than at any prior time in history; yet the mechanisms for routing information are inadequate relics of a bygone age. Much of what is circulated and distributed at present is either not read or not relevant to the person who receives it."

Martin Greenberger, author of that statement, also enumerates the practical usefulness of the research tools as follows:

(a) adequate up-to-date source material stored in machine readable memory
(b) indexes and abstracts for this material which provide a variety of classifications and types of information
(c) an interrogation language that allows the researcher to make inquiries in free-form using English words
(d) a computer that operates with the indexes, abstracts, and interrogation language to give the researcher flexible access to the source material
(e) a terminal to the computer that displays selected pages on the face of a tube, and converts these pages to microfilm or hard copy at his option*

13. CONCLUSION. There is an enormous amount of documentary, chronological and biographical data on the Arab world. The value of information grows inexorably, and the established ways of coping with it no longer work for scientists striving to be well informed.

A researcher in this discipline often spends and travels weeks, months, and even years, searching in libraries, archives, and government offices to compile documentation and data for a specific research problem. All researchers are aware of this formidable task and the frustrating time-wasting problem it creates for them as well as others.

The program described above is a tested approach to the critical problem of the development of effective tools for research in the social sciences and especially history, government, international studies, and political science through the use of readily available equipment and techniques.

Part Three

SOME USEFUL DATA ON THE ARAB WORLD

A. RELEVANT INFORMATION ON THE ARAB STATES

1. The country of South Yemen consists of the city of Aden, a former British Crown Colony, and sixteen less developed small states, which between 1959 and 1964 joined with Aden Colony to form the Federation of South Arabia. In 1965 British rule and British-protected traditional rulers were opposed by two national groups, the Federation for the Liberation of South Yemen (FLOSY) and the National Liberation Front (NLF). In 1967 the British entered negotiations with the NLF, the organization which finally established power. As a result of the negotiations, South Arabia, including Aden, was granted independence on November 30, 1967, and was renamed the People's Republic of Southern Yemen.

2. Iran has been called Iran only since 1935. Before then it was Persia.

3. Transjordan did not assume this name until 1921. The country of Jordan was formed in June of 1949.

4. Saudi Arabia was formed in 1932. Before 1932 there were several small countries in that area like Hejaz, Nejd, and so on.

5. On February 5, 1958, Syria and Egypt joined to become the United Arab Republic, which is abbreviated as UAR. Syria stepped out of the merger in September of 1961, but Egypt retained the name UAR.

6. On November 29, 1947, a UN Resolution was passed providing for the partition of Palestine into two states: Jewish Palestine and Arab Palestine. When the British mandate in Palestine ended at midnight May 14/15, 1948, and the State of Israel came into existence, the guerilla fighting which had been occurring between Jews and Arabs reached a state of open warfare. Arab forces immediately began moving into Palestine and occupied those Arab areas not under Israel's control. As a result of the war, Israel was left with twenty-five per cent more territory than had been provided for the new country in the UN resolution. Fighting continued until an armistice between Transjordan and Israel was signed on April 3, 1949. The result was that Transjordan occupied the part of Palestine not in the possession of Israel. This territory was joined to Jordan on April 24, 1950.

7. In February, 1958, Iraq and Jordan joined to form the Arab Federation to counteract the UAR. However, the merger was short-lived and was dissolved on July 14, 1958.

8. The Persian Gulf and the Arabian Gulf are the same thing. The Persians call it the Persian Gulf and the Arabians call it the Arabian Gulf.

9. From 1553–1911 Libya was ruled by Turkey. From 1911 until World War II it was an Italian colony. Tripolitania and Cyrenaica were under British administration, while Fezzan was under French jurisdiction.

Libya declared its independence on December 24, 1951. It was in 1934 that Italy adopted the name Libya for the whole area which was previously known only by the names of the three provinces mentioned above.

D. TITLES AND HONORIFICS OCCURRING IN THE CHRONOLOGIES

The following is a listing of some of the honorifics of the Arab world.

Amir Title of a prince of the royal family.

Bey Title, Turkish origin, bestowed by the king on high officials of the government who are less in stature than those who receive the title pasha.

Caliph Title of former heads of Moslem dynasties; caliphates used in early Islamic era.

Hajj	Title given to a person who has performed the pilgrimage to Mecca.
Iman	Title of a leader of prayer in a mosque; also of the king of Yemen.
Mufti	Title of the chief authority on Moslem Law in the UAR, or the chief authority on Moslem Law in other Arab countries.
Mukhtar	Title of the head of a village in most Arab countries.
Pasha	Title, Turkish origin, bestowed by the king on selected persons and to persons of high rank: Ministers, high ranking officers etc. It is used after the name of such persons.
Qadi	Title of a judge both in religious and civil courts.
Shah	Ruler of Iran. Usually used without the definite article.
Sheikh	Title of religious Moslem dignitary (in Arab lands), an old person, head of a Moslem religious sect (Iraq, Syria, Lebanon), a chief of a bedouin tribe, a ruler of a Sheikhdom in the Arabian Peninsula (Kuwait, Hadramut etc.)
Sherif	Title of a noble person, a descendant of the Prophet Muhammad.
Sultan	Title of the Ruler of a small Moslem or non-Moslem state in Africa or Arabia.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

It will be impossible to list the scores of graduate and undergraduate students, professional colleagues and others who have served as project and research assistants or consultants. Most of the project assistants come from disciplines related to our project and its needs, such as history, political science, government, English, journalism, Italian, French, Russian, Arabic, Hebrew and even Chinese. To all of these the author is deeply grateful.

During the last ten years a large number of our staff made significant contributions. Some names have no doubt been inadvertently omitted and I appeal for their forgiveness.

And the department secretary, Agnes Rapp, gave invaluable help to all throughout the years of the project.

Several project assistants conducted research for us abroad. Again, it will be difficult to list all of them. They include Ann Wharton [London], Leslie A. Smith [London], H. van Hulsbergen [Amsterdam and The Hague], M. Artzi [Tel Aviv], H. Ohayon [Jerusalem], Susan Erber [Washington, D.C. and Jerusalem], Dan Smithe [Cairo]. The author himself conducted research in Israel, North Africa, Jordan, Lebanon, England, Holland and Italy.

The author is greatly indebted to many colleagues in the USA and abroad who have helped in many ways. Above all to Professor Richard Venezky, professor of English and Computer Science, who developed the programs used first for CDC3600 and subsequently for the UNIVAC 1108 computer system for indexing and data processing. Invaluable assistance in this area was also rendered by William Lageroos, computer consultant for the University of Wisconsin Computer Center and Nathan Relles, graduate consultant in Computer Science, and Professor Arthur Goldschmidt, Jr., consultant, Pennsylvania State University.

The following scholars have been consulted concerning the project. Their views and critical observations have been most useful. However, any errors, omissions and defects in the project are the responsibility of the author himself. Three scholars who were most encouraging and inspiring were Sir Hamilton R. Gibb, former Director of the Harvard Center of Middle East Studies; Dr. Carl P. Epstein, Research Specialist, US Office of Education and Dr. Robert Leestma, Associate Commissioner, US Office of Education, Institute of International Studies. But for Dr. Leestma's encouragement I doubt whether this project would have ever reached this stage.

The following list includes some of the numerous colleagues and scholars who took interest in our project. I am grateful to all of them for their sustained interest. It is understood that they could not be held responsible for any errors or omissions in this multivolumed project.

Professor C. Arnold Anderson, University of Chicago, Chicago
Dr. J. Bader, Consultant to the US Senate Foreign Relations Committee

Indices for the years 1956 through 1967 appear in Volume 7.

A Note for the User

Political and Diplomatic History of the Arab World consists of brief accounts in chronological order of internationally significant events concerning the Arab world, 1900-67. These two volumes constitute a keyword index to those accounts.

It should be clearly understood that this is not an index to the sources from which the accounts were drawn; it is rather an index to the accounts as recorded in the chronology. The index has been designed, however, as a multipurpose tool and can be used without the chronology for in-depth research.

Under each keyword are one or more entries. Each entry supplies two items of information: one is a brief reference to an event, i.e. a few words excerpted from the account of the event as given in the chronology, and the other is the date on which the event occurred.

Thus the user can first peruse the references under the topic or topics he has selected and, if amplification of any reference is desired, he can then consult either the account in the chronology or contemporary accounts in newspapers, journals, government documents, and other primary material generated on or about the dates cited.

The initial breakdown is temporal. Thirty-three separate indices using identical subject headings have been prepared; they cover periods varying from six months to twenty years, depending on the volume of political activity—and the material generated thereby— in any given period. The dual objective of this arrangement is to present subject-oriented material in conveniently usable increments and to allow a subject-in-time as well as a purely subject approach to research.

Within each index, subject headings are given alphabetically. Applicable cross-references are listed below each subject heading, followed by the entries themselves, in chronological order. As the index is based on key words, each event, on the average, is listed under three or four keywords thus providing comprehensive coverage for users with varied approaches and goals.
